Dear Rivix Hiring Team,

I've built my career on turning strategic relationships into sustained revenue growth, and I'm ready to bring that approach to your B2B workwear business across Alberta.

At Niagara College, I increased international enrollment by 90% within 12 months by focusing on what matters most in B2B sales: understanding client needs, building trust, and creating partnerships that last. I didn't chase one-off enrollments—I developed relationships with education consultants and institutions that generated recurring revenue year after year. That same mindset applies perfectly to building uniform programs with construction, trades, and industrial companies that need reliable, ongoing service.

More recently at QuestJobs, I've led initiatives to establish high-ticket partnerships that generated qualified leads within 6 months. I know how to identify decision-makers, demonstrate value, and close deals that turn into long-term accounts. Working remotely across multiple time zones has taught me how to stay organized, responsive, and results-driven without needing constant oversight.

What sets me apart is my ability to work cross-functionally and think strategically. Whether I'm collaborating with marketing teams or working directly with clients, I focus on creating frameworks that drive consistent growth. I increased revenue by over 80% in multiple roles by staying disciplined, creative, and client-focused.

I'm based in Ontario but ready to work remotely with the flexibility this role requires. I understand the Alberta market's industrial backbone, and I'm excited to build relationships with companies that value dependable service and long-term partnership.

Let's talk about how I can help grow Rivix's presence across Alberta.

Sincerely,

Matthew Marois
